

Software License

This Preamble is intended to describe, in plain English, the nature, intent, and scope of this License. However, this Preamble is not a part of this License. The legal effect of this License is dependent only upon the terms of the License and not this Preamble.

This license is based upon the principle that the sharing of software with other research and teaching institutions is vital to higher education and the development of knowledge and understanding. However, this must be weighed against the protection of intellectual property. Therefore, we allow the free use of our software at other research institutions but reserve the rights to sell, modify, and distribute the software. We further allow the use of the source in order to improve the application but restrict the use of the source.

This Agreement, effective as of _____, is between the University of Massachusetts Amherst, a public institution of higher education of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and _____.

1. GRANT OF RIGHT: The software program _____, provided in binary and source code format (the “Program” and “Source” respectively) and any related documentation (the “Documentation”) are licensed, not sold, to you. The University of Massachusetts Amherst, grants you a personal, non-exclusive and non-transferable right to use the Program, Source, and Documentation, subject to the terms and restrictions of this Agreement. You may make as many copies of the Program, Source, and/or Documentation as needed in order to use and/or modify the software. However, you may not redistribute the software with your changes without approval of the University of Massachusetts Amherst. You may donate your changes to the Laboratory for Advanced Software Engineering Research in which case we may opt to include your changes into the official distribution of the software.
